

Miriam Polano

Miriam Polano is currently enrolled in the Electric, Electronics and Communication Engineering PhD program in Politecnico di Torino, and part of the Materials and Processes for Micro and Nano Technologies group. Her research is based on the development of photopolymerizable resins for additive manufacturing, in particular with two photon polymerization system, and on printing process optimization to manufacture optical components for biosensing applications.